DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. Previous rejections/issues not addressed below are withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-9,11-16,18-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Blais (CA 2332187; 7/24/02). Blais teaches a method of treating fertilizer with bacteria. In a fermentation process, there is a dormancy up to 2 hours following a period of logarithmic bacterial reproduction of 10 to the eighth cells/ml. See page 2. After the reproduction stage, the ferment is stopped to an action to stop fermentation by cooling the ferment is brought to a temperature of below 5 degrees C. The ferment is then sprayed onto the fertilizer particles and the bacteria remain in a latent stable state. The ferment may be applied to the bacteria using binding agents such as starch or talc. The bacterial(ferment)-fertilizer product can be applied to plant roots by spraying means. See page 3. The bacteria on the fertilizer remain stable and active and resume their activity when rehydrated. The ferment contains nutritive elements that may be adjusted. The bacteria can be nitrogen fixing bacteria and microbes in the dairy industry. The nutritive material in the fermentation can be selected from milk, animal, fish products and sugars. See page 4. The bacterial-fertilizer product can be applied to a variety of products selected rice, cucumbers, celery and corn plants. As a result of said application the plants exhibit enhanced growth, more leaf and a more developed root system. See page 5. Blais does not teach granules and a rate of at most 3 liters of ferment per ton fertilizer. It is obvious that the particles would encompass granules. With respect to the application rate, an artisan would have been expected to determine the optimal rate of application of ferment to fertilizer. One would have been motivated to do this in order to develop a ferment-fertilizer that would have been most effective in promoting plant growth and yield.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
